

A Bibliography of Fire Safety Books

Some Thoughts. . .

- I made up a bibliography of my themed books, because after awhile, I had zillions of books. When I'd go to garage sales, I'd bring my folder filled with my lists of books so I knew what I had. The bibliographies also helped parents of my students. They'd ask: "What books do you recommend for such and such?" and I'd give them a copy.
- Now that I have a website, I think a list of tried and true favorites helps teachers, especially new ones, as well as parents.
- In the beginning I included prices. Obviously these change over the years, but they at least give you a price point. I highly recommend buying used books from Amazon. I've also found fabulous finds at Good Will and other second hand stores. Of course my favorite place to get super-deals is still at garage sales.
- I have since added more books to my collection. They are my nemesis as I'm a bibliophile exponentially! I no longer have the time to go back and up-date my bibliographies. At least this is some place to start. I hope you find my list helpful.
- I keep most of my collection in separate file boxes that they sell at office supply stores. I label each box by theme, so they are easy to find. i.e. all of my Fire Safety books are in one box. Each stack of boxes is in its own monthly section. I start with September and have a box of apple books, back to school books, etc. Yes, my basement looks like a warehouse! We have now spilled over into a huge storage unit as well, where I keep most of my monthly teaching stuff.
