

Nature Alphabet Book:

If your students are kindergartners, by the end of the year, they should know the letters of the alphabet, so why not celebrate and have a review by doing a nature alphabet book.

Run off my block letters and pass one out to each of your students. Try to match up student initials with a letter, or put them face down on the floor and have each child scamper to pick one up and identify the mystery letter they will do.

Send the note home to parents explaining the project, or go on your own nature walk and have children collect things.

Students can try and find things in nature that begin with that letter, look like that letter, or simply collect anything and collage their letter.

Mount each page on a different sheet of colored construction paper for each one, collate your class book and read it to your students.

If you want to make it sturdier, cover the top of each page with a sheet of contact paper.

This makes a great keepsake that new students will enjoy for years to come. You can do another nature book in the fall with your new students and compare and contrast the different kinds of things that they find.

When I went looking for things for my sample page, I found some huge leaves. I decided to write notes to my students telling them that I hoped they had had a fun time on their walk.

You could write leaf letters for any reason, or you could collect some huge leaves and have your students compose their own leaf letters using word-wall words.

Dear Families,

Attached is the letter your child has chosen to collage for our Alphabet Nature Book.

- Please go for a nature walk with them and collect some things to glue to their letter.
- These things can begin with the same letter as the letter on their page such as a piece of glass if your child's letter is G, or they may look like the letter such as a twig that is in the shape of an L if they have the letter L, or they may simply collect things on their walk and glue them on their letter.
- Please have them identify the things that they find and ask them what letters they begin with.
- Your child's page is due

- Thanks in advance for helping us review the alphabet in this fun way.
 - I will be collecting all of the pages and making them into a class book.

Educationally Yours,

Jason,
Fun I hope you had
